ANXIETY

Worry is a normal feeling that we all experience. But sometimes that worry can turn into anxiety, which some kids feel in their thoughts or their bodies (like sweatiness, stomachache, or rapid breathing) and make it hard for them to enjoy normal things like playing with friends, or doing schoolwork. This group helps kids understand how to cope with these feelings and manage their worries in a way that allows them to thoroughly enjoy being a kid again. This group will allow your child to explore their thoughts and emotions through reading short stories, watching videos, doing art projects, and connecting with other kids.

AAPI CULTURE & MENTAL WELL-BEING

Asian Americans have been reported to be the racial group with the lowest in utilizing mental health services despite being equally or sometimes more prone to mental illness and psychological distress compared to the general population. It can be a common struggle amongst members in the Asian American community to understand and address the unique mental health needs that many may experience. In this group, we will be exploring the Asian American experience in mental health, addressing mental health barriers, and identifying ways to remove obstacles to Asian American mental well-being.
