In My Granny’s Garden

Theresa Young

In “In My Granny’s Garden,” Riley and Kiley are sister and brother. They are also twins. They also know un-thanks. Their mother is a children’s author. She recently wrote “Shapes in Music,” a picture book in which she and her husband, Julie Galle Baggenstoss, created the pictures. Riley and Kiley are out and rolling around again! It could be Bob (The ORIGINAL Dust Bunnies (Ed, Ned, Ted and Bob) are out and rolling around again! It could be Bob!)

Do You Love the Dark?

Jerry G. White

In “Do You Love the Dark?” a family comes across an old suitcase in their garage. As we do so often in the spring, the children are amazed to discover that the suitcase contains a spirit. The children name the spirit Riley and invite her to come live with them. Riley soon learns that the very light that she loves so much has the power to drive her away. What will the children do to keep Riley from being driven away?

Knick, Knock

Theresa Young

In “Knick, Knock,” a family is busy clearing brush and preparing for the season. They discover a fresh-cut tree that they can’t believe is standing still. They try to move it, but the tree remains in place. The family begins to wonder if there may be a reason why the tree is still standing where it is.

Shapes in Music

By Theresa Young

In “Shapes in Music,” Johnny B. and his friends are preparing to celebrate their great day. They are about to embark on an exciting adventure to explore the world of music. But first, they must learn about shapes! In this book, children will discover the shapes that make up music, such as notes, rhythms, and dynamics. Through engaging illustrations and fun facts, they will learn how different shapes can create different sounds and emotions. This book is perfect for kids of all ages who are eager to dive into the fascinating world of music! A new book in the “Shapes” series!
