Fulton County Schools to hold year-end celebration for student teacher interns April 24

What: Celebration for GO First Step student teacher interns for completion of year-long internship with Fulton County Schools (FCS).

Why: The Go First Step program student interns will “graduate” from FCS’ unique, year-long program. GO First Step is a crucial component in the district’s recruiting efforts to draw top talent. The program aims to develop high-quality teacher candidates by providing an impactful and engaging experience throughout the entire school year, with FCS’ best cooperating teachers.

FCS collaborates with education departments from five local colleges and universities, and students who successfully complete the program receive a $3,000 stipend, disbursed in two payments during the year. Educational institutions include Georgia State University, Kennesaw State University, Spelman College, University of West Georgia and Clark Atlanta University.

Many of these student interns will be teachers in Fulton County Schools next year.
